Green Tree on the Ridge Pole.

A carpenter was noticed on Saturday, nailing a green pine tree on the eaves of the roof of a new dwelling. A large number of citizens with curiosity called upon the man in the street below watching the man nailing the green tree in its place. They were masons, carpenters and laborers who were employed on the new building. When the tree was fixed in its place the group began cheered, and then each in turn grasped and shook by the hand a man who stood among them, but who had a coat on. This was the owner of the new house.

"Why is that green tree placed up there on the top of the house?" was asked of the man who had nailed it to the end of a ridge pole.

"Well, it is a custom, as I understand, that comes down from the old days in New England. When a young couple had got the timber morsels and otherwise wise all ready to build their house, the neighbors were summoned to the raising as the friends of one another. The house was built in place by the whole company. A green tree nailed to the topmost timber was lifted with it. This was to indicate that the couple were to flourish after the manner of a green briar tree. After all the male neighbors had been put in place the company was entertained with cider and pumpkin pie. Besides this there was usually a demolition of mustard run for the men folk." — Y. M. Letter.

—Tales papers are recounting the marvelous story of a hoop snake that chased a little girl, who dodged behind a tree which the snake struck with the spike at the end of its tail, causing the tree to tremble in every bough and the leaves to waver and drop off at once.
The tale is put down among the tales of the present, indeed, and is believed to be true, as it is fully fifty years old, and has never been authentically told. It is a comfort to be told that the snake was killed, so that it can do no further harm. — *Galveston News.

How We Wash the World.

"We Americans are not the most greedy people in the world they care next door to it, and I can prove it," said a prominent soap manufacturer.

"How?"

"By this lot of goods," he pointed to this case before him. They comprised an immense invoice for shipment by to-day's steamer. "Cleanliness is next to godliness, you know," he continued, "and I really believe America washes the world. Soap made here is found in every large city of the united States, and in every part of the world. The common or pound brands are used extensively by the soldiers, men at sea, and passengers of all kinds.
The mills of France and Germany are stocked with it, in fact, it is used from the Orient to the Occident."

"The pound brand is the common brand, is it not?"

"Yes, but there are many sweet-scented soaps that find their way across the sea as well. Medicinal soaps especially.
Sulphur soap, manufactured in the United States, is well known and understood by the people of India in particular, but the manufacturers of their own soaps have made right here in our country. One of our best brands is

WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 25, 1884.

JEROME LOEGAN, the Secretary of the Treasury, is seriously ill at his home in Geneva, N. Y. His friends are fearful that he has heart-disease.

CHICAGO Inter-Ocean: If Carter Harrison is going to paint Illinois red and streak it with pale blue he would do well to get his paint pots in order. The first thing he knows Uncle Dick will bottle him up, as it were.

If, as the public records at Buffalo show, Grover Cleveland made $70,000 out of the office of Sheriff of Erie county, over and above his salary, during the three years he held it, how much would he probably make out of a four years' term in the White House at Washington? It is a problem in speculative mathematics.

The indications of a general break-up in the Democratic party in the South are not so decided as to warrant the prophecy that it will come at the next election, but the sugar planters of Louisiana give no uncertain sound. The Democratic party of the future, if there is to be any Democratic party, will have to be mixed by a new receipt with a good deal of tar in it.

Capt. EDWARD H. GREEN, who was Democratic Mayor of Aurora, Ind., from 1877 to 1881, and who was a Democratic member of the Indiana Legislature in 1880 and 1877, has declared for Blaine and Logan. Capt. Green has been a leader among the Democrats of the southern part of the Hoosier State since 1854, when he made a speech in that section against Know-Nothingism. He has no doubt that Indiana will be carried for Blaine if the State is properly organized and an active canvass is made.

The convict labor policy of the Democratic party in Kentucky is not in its nature calculated to promote honest industry. The Louisville Times says of it:

It has been demonstrated that 600 convicts, driven labor in season and out of season by the lash of taskmasters, can mine all the coal for which transportation can be had over the Cincinnati, Ohio and Southwestern Road. It has been shown that free labor can not compete with this slave labor, and therefore the continued employment of the convicts will take the bread from the mouths of 1,000 free, honest workingmen, and drive them, their wives and children, from the State of their birth or adoption.

The "Sun" Exults.

In defining the position as an independent Democratic paper the New York Sun says:

The Sun has long supported the Democratic party and wishes to support it now, but it has become tired of standing by it in fatal and foolish blunders. The nomination of Grover Cleveland is one of those, and the Sun refuses to stand by the party in that nomination. We are happy to add that a very great proportion of the Democrats of the country are the same mind as the Sun. They cannot stand Grover Cleveland for President.

Gen. EDWARD F. NOYES, ex-Governor of Ohio and ex-Minister to France, who has just arrived in New York from a three months' visit to Europe, says:

While in London and Paris I endeavored to ascertain all I could regarding the political situation at home. I think there will be a big fight in October, and the result at that time will bear largely upon the Presidential contest the following month. From what I have learned, though, there is but little doubt of Blaine's triumph. In England the mass of the people appear inclined to favor Cleveland's election, because of a notion that Blaine would inaugurate an aggressive foreign policy, and also for the reason that he is a pronounced sympathizer with the Irish. I shall leave for Ohio to night, and shall probably take an active part in the canvass.

St. John Meeting.

ROCK LAKE, N. Y., August 25.—The St. John National Temperance meeting was commenced yesterday afternoon with a witty and pointed address by Mrs. FIXEY, of Minnesota. She spoke for more than an hour. Last night Mrs. YOUNGSON, of Canada, addressed the Convention. She is doing active work for St. John in the present campaign. Many speakers of national distinction will occupy the rostrum during the progress of the meeting, which will close on Saturday. Sunday afternoon, however, St. John will be closed.

With more than a hundred citizens here to help, we expect a large turnout.

Utica Herald: The demand for Mr. Cleveland's retirement from the Democratic ticket grows louder. The religious press demands it in the name of decency. The leading Democratic paper of the country, the New York Sun, demands it both in the name of decency and as the first necessary step toward a hopeful campaign. In staunchly Democratic Georgia the Beacon Telegraph virtually throws up the sponge, if the fight is to be made with Cleveland at the head of the ticket. The Pittsburgh Sunday (John) takes down the name of Cleveland and Hendricks because of objections to Cleveland, and "hoists" that of Butler. The spirit of revolt extends throughout the country. Mr. Cleveland may be forced off the ticket. Those who demand his retirement express no hope that he will voluntarily step aside.

The organ now in use in the Episcopal church, Decatur, is offered for sale to make room for a larger one. Churches or societies contemplating the purchase of an organ should call on or address the undersigned before buying. CLARKE HANGED.

Troops En-route to Prevent a Rescue Throw from the Track—Their Timely Arrival.

Eighteen Such Crimes as That For Which Clarke Suffered Executed During One Year in Georgia.

DAWSON, Ga., August 26.—Yesterday the execution of George Clarke, a colored lad of eighteen years of age, for an outrageous assault upon his employer's wife, was witnessed by a vast throng. Since the first of April there have been eighteen rapes upon white women in Georgia by negro men. Two of the men have been lynched, one executed by process of law, three are awaiting trial and the others have escaped. Notwithstanding the severity of the crime for which George Clarke was executed, the colored people took it into their heads that the manner of his conviction was persecution. They were intensely interested in the trial, and when sentence was pronounced they cheered as though Clarke was a martyr, dallying account of his color, strange as it may seem, one of the strongest points of grievance that the colored people had was that Clarke was sentenced to be executed Monday instead of the trial being adjourned.

This change of looked like crookedness to the negroes, who thought that the trial was not over Saturday evening, however, that the storm took such shape as to demand notice. The negroes were assembling on the outskirts of the town from all quarters. It was asserted that during the night a attack was made on the jail by Mr. Buchanan at a late hour, and that Governor McDaniel at once called for troops. In answer the Governor gave orders that the military company nearest Dawson was to proceed there and preserve order. In consequence, Captain Woolfolk, of the Albany Guards, who also figured in the apprehension of the negroes, was sent, who came to proceed at once to Dawson. In the meantime affairs here were threatening. Negroes openly talked of killing any white man who caused one of their own color to be shot. The Albany Company failed to arrive at the appointed time, and it began to look as if the negroes would do their own way. It was not until a little while before the execution that the Guards arrived. The trials had been wrecked near Albany, evidently by accomplices of the Dawson negroes, to damage the negroes, and none of the injuries received by the military will, it is thought, result seriously. The negroes had camped the night as best they could until a train came along on which they could proceed. They did not stop at Dawson, but waited in the mountains. Their arrival with bayonets fixed, drew out many forces from the negro leaders, who found they had been followed. One or two bricks were thrown, but before the fusilade had gained any proportions a report that the militia were about to open fire caused the negroes to run, many being stampeded through the crowd. The entire crowd stampeded through the streets, many being trampled under foot during the panic. At twelve o'clock Clarke was taken from his cell, and under escort of the troops marched to the rear of the trial and at 12:30 o'clock was led out in the presence of 6,000 or 7,000 spectators without any opposing demonstration of any sort. The mob slowly dispersed to the negro quarters. The negroes now propose to give Clarke's body an imposing burial, as the trouble between the races may be re-opened.
